* OBSTRUCTING_LEGISLATION.

One dispatches yesterday reported that Representative Mide, of Texas, had an-rounced the purpose of his party not to permit the chubican majority to "pass a single measure without our consent." This threat is not an idle one, for by abuse and misuse of the rules of the house a minority can celeat the wiches of the majority. How this can be done; how it repeatedly has been done, is clearly explained by Representative Reed, of Maine, in the October number of the North Ancrican Review.

The rules of the house of representatives were made upon the hypothesis that every member would conform to their spirit and intent and not relate both while keeping to the letter. Mounts to adjourn to take a retess, to adjourn to a future day, are all necessary to the transaction of proper business, and yet a member may make one or all of these motions and repeat the series again and again, simply to avail himself of "the forms of rules intended to insilitate business. for the solopurpose of obstructing business."
Whonever bills are presented to the house or reference to appropriate committees, any men ber can demand that the bill be read. The interv of this rule is so far perverted that it has many times has pened that "the member himself has introduced, for the purpose of demanding their reading, long and ledicus, bills in which he had no intereston which two-thirds of the house would otherwise have voted to passubill which was obnoxious to this single member." The provision of the constitution that whenever one-lifth of the members desire it the year and mays shall be entered on the journal has been completely furned from its purpose by filling the pages of the house journal with the record of the year and nays on frivolous motions. In the last congre the bill to refun! the direct war tax to the states that paid it was, by the aid of dilatory motions and the abuse of the right to call the year and mays, postponed to a session beyond the election, when President Cleveland if re-elected rould weto it without for land if re-etected could veto it, without fear, if not without reproach. Another case of abuse of the spirt, of the rules was that of the Union Pacific funding bill. Under the rules of the house, on two Mondays in each month, after the presentation of hills, the rest of the day is set apart to enable the house, after a short debate, to pass bills by a two-thirds' vote, or so to suspend other rules as to enable particular measures to be considered on special days. On the day when the funding bill was to come up, a member introduced a bill to provide for the codificaintroduced a bill to provide for the codifica tion of the laws, of the District of Columbia and demanded the reading of it. This of course finished the congressional day, and thus ander a republican form of government two thirds of the house of representatives were deprived of the power to say whether a settlement with the largest single creditor of the government, a plan that had been approved by a commission specially appointed by President Oleveland and by committee appointed by Speaker Carlisle.

should be discussed or not.
This above of the rules of the house is in-greating every year. Up to 1882 it was al-ways a point of honor not to use dilatory motions it an election case, on the ground that to prevent a decision upon a contested that to prevent a decision upon a contested election case was "to undermine the very foundations of rationness, government, —the duty of the house to determine the election of its own members. Its own charsoler being determined by its membership." But in 1882 the democrats refused to vote in an election case, and when a quorum of rethem vote, until the house, by a change of its rules, summarily took away the power of using dilatory, motions in election cases. This change of the rules was abrogated, the return of the democrats to power, and filibustering in an election case is again become part of the obstructive inc-less of the croposition.

Reed grants that sometimes the use of distory motions may be justifiable when majorities have refused the right of debate, or have tried to rush through the house: measures of great public importance without giving the country a chance to be heard. In the next house the republicans, even with the votes of Washington, Montana and the Dakotan will have but seven above a querum, which is bardly enough for busi ness. Mr. Reed says some effort will be made next December to establish rules which will facilitate the public business, instead of the present rules, which only delay

PROJEBITION AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Prohibitian and woman suffrage were both woted down in Washington. Prohibition at one time was generally supported by the ad-womens of women suffrage, and it is but re-ceptly that the leaders of the woman suffrage party have had their eyes opened to the fact that if the profibitionists had been unloaded long ago woman suffrage would have hat is more patient hearing. Practical men have no patience with prolit-bition, because i, is based on an utterly false philosophy, whether in the comain of political economy, government or moral responsibility. Problittion and no standing whatever with the great thinkers of the, world, whether in this country or Europe, and for this reason the Stiempt to marry problinging men dight at the expediency of an enlargement of the suffrage, which seemed to the restence of worthless, costly and denoralizing legislation. That is to say, practical reasoners said: "If these woman suffraging are all or men're all the first things is raised. many: "It mess woman suffragists are all pro-mently all prohibitionits in the green tree of distranchisoment, what will they be in the dry tree of suffrage?" The hearty disgust-and draid excited by the prohibition "crazo" materially fraught the mover tent for woman suffrage into more or less distavor, it not contempt, with men who believed that a vote for women suffrage mount or rote for for woman suffrage meant & vote for probifor woman suffrage meant a vote for prohibition and vice versa; they were deemed generally to be tarred with the same stick.
White we do not anticipate that woman suffrage is ikely to be adopted on this coast or anywhere eise at any hear date, nevertheless, the opposition to woman suffrage and anticipate different grounds than the rests on entirely different grounds than the hoetlity felt for prohibition. Prohibition is hated because it is absolutely false in its assumed philosophy of government and morals; it is a permicious and demoralizing means to the end in view, while woman suffrage is resisted on the ground that it is not expedient to immense y entarge the suffrage without some clear and near pros-pect of scoul and notitical companisation. It is not elear that the gift of suffrage would help women to anything that increases their nelly woned to anything that interacts their salety, happiness, or; usefulness in this world. There are no tights of life, liberey or the pursuit of happiness from which momen are harved by the denial of the ballot; there are no social wrongs or sufferings now endured by wamen in distinction from men that it is clear the Aift of the suffrage would care. There is strength in the logic which says that the vast mass of the law-makins power should be the arms bearing power, and for these and many other reasons many good men, who are true friends of many good wor en, consciention and dyspepsia. There were many features of the crime that led to the belief that the woman was insane, but there was no insane asylum at that time in the state, and she was com-mitted to the penitentiary under life sen-

If the two issues did not work against each other in this test it is evident that they did not work together and puzzled reformers all over the new state are coninsedly trying to reconcile the results with their unte-election expectations.

Votes were east in Washington on the question of capital location for Yakima and North Yakima, and the question now areses, shull these votes all be counted for the town of North Yakima, or not? North Yakima herself will, of course, count them that way, but Eilensburgh demands that the votes be divided between the two towns, for according to the postal guide these are two separate towns. Such a division of North Yakima's strength would place Eilensburgh as

A full balance of nearly $23,000,000 was distributed between the helrs and legateos of the late Charles Grooker within a year after his death. The estate was approphed at $24,142,474. The relatively small expense attached to the settlement and distribution of the estate is largely the result of a decent and orderly domestic life and its fruit, in legitimate heits who never had any cares to go into hiding but were honeatly known as the children of their parents. Thus, while the Blythe estate is likely to be absorbed in litigation over the chaims of a putative heir Crocker's wealth has quigity reverted to his descendants.
